

Assault of Innocence: A Christians Struggle and Victory over Child Pornography

Society has a natural tendency to instantly demonize those involved with child pornography. Ironically, this attitude is keeping our children at risk. These feelings of rage, vengeance and unforgiveness are the very reason that people who are afflicted with this disease are afraid to seek help. The result is all too often catastrophic, leading to crippling and even deadly consequences to both the children and the person afflicted. This is not just a mental battle, but a spiritual battle as well. To win requires the supernatural healing power of Jesus Christ. Just as prayer can thrust a deadly cancer into complete remission, it can do the same towards an addiction to child pornography. I am living proof of this. It was my faith and trust in the Lord that rescued me. Now I'm reaching out to help others find the light of salvation and deliverance from this horrible disease.
