

Economic Security: Neglected Dimension of National Security

The conference was designed around a systemic framework that could be used to develop a grand strategy surrounding the Nations economy as a subsystem of national security. The panels and keynote presentations looked at the economic element of national power from different system views. Those views including the role of debt, the government, industrial capability, energy, science, technology, and hum capital create a systemic view of what could be done to improve an understanding of the economic element of national power.

Selected papers from the conference represent these views comprise this volume.
