

Am I An Alien?: Thin Lines Series Number One

She was around four when we came. I'm not sure how many of us made that particular voyage. Sparkling visions of earth's land and water broke through the clouds. I was amazed that the beauty of this location surpassed my expectations. There she was, playing in the back yard, rocking a doll by the kumquat tree. We lowered, hovered over and welcomed her on board our craft. She came in and I went out. I continued the mindless activity. Her mom, rather, my mom came out of the house screaming as our craft propelled away from this homey plant-filled back yard. Bring back my Ali, mom cried. I am right here, I said. Mom ran to me, embracing, as I felt a warm, comfortable, purposeful existence in my everlasting life begin. I went inside the house and tied my first bow on a red satin dress covered with a white frilly apron.
